Going to Law.

Two Dutchmen who owned and used in common a small bridge over a stream which ran through their farms, had a dispute concerning some repairs which it required, and one of them positively refused to bear any portion of the expense necessary to the purchase of a few planks. Finally, the aggrieved party went to a neighboring lawyer, and placing $10 in his hand said:

"I'll give you all dish moneys if you'll make Hans do justice mit de pridge."

"How much will it cost to repair it?" asked the honest lawyer.

"Not more ash five tollar," replied the Dutchman.

"Very well," said the lawyer, pocketing one of the notes and giving him the other, "take this and go and get the bridge repaired; 'tis the best course you can take."

"Yaas," said the dutchman, slowly "yaas, dat is more better as to quarrel mit Hans;" but as he went along home he shook his head frequently, as if unable after all, to see quite clearly how he had gained anything by going to law.

"Martha, does thee love me?" asked a Quaker youth of one at whose shrine his heart's holiest feelings had been offered up.

"Why, Seth," answered she, "we are commanded to love one another; are we not?"

"Ah! Martha, but does thee regard me with the feeling the world calls love?"

"I hardly know what to tell thee, Seth. I have greatly feared that my heart is an erring one. I have tried to bestow my love on all; but I have sometimes thought, perhaps, that thee was getting rather more than thy share."

A lady reached the passenger depot in Dayton, Ohio, the other day, just as the train she intend to take was leaving, and as she stood almost crying with vexation on the platform a gentleman arrived at the depot on a full run, with his carpet-bag in his hand, his coat on his arm, and his face streaming with perspiration. As he looked on the train now fast moving away, he sat down on his carpet-bag, wiped his face, and deliberately and emphatically said, "D—n that train!" The lady heard him, and smiling upon him with a lady's sweetness, said, "Thank you, sir."

A young lady called at one of our music stores the other day and asked for something new in piano music. The clerk asked her if it made any difference how many sharps there in the peice. "Oh, no," she replied, "not in the least, for if there are more than two I always scratch them out with my penknife."

They were twins, were these two little girls, and Pat said: "Them gals is cousins, ain't they?" "No," replied the mother, "they are twins." "Yees don't say so," said Pat; "well now, bedad, they look enough alike to be sisters."

Scene—Examination of special classes in agriculture, commerce, etc. Examiner:—"Well, can you tell me what a square root is?" Student:—"Excuse me, sir, but I'm not in the agricultural department."

A political speaker accused a rival of "unfathomable meanness," and then, rising to the occasion, said: "I warn him not to persist in his disgraceful course, or he'll find that two of us can play at that game."

"Oh!" said the afflicted wife, weeping over his remains, "he said he would take off his flannels any way; and—poor man!—he little thought how soon he would go to that place where flannels are never needed!"

"Oh, yes, they have ribs enough," she replied, as she laid down a corset, "but they don't feel like a man's arm, and you don't look for 'em Sunday night."

Of a dull student a professor said: "I suppose he is made like other folks, but I will venture to say that it would puzzle an anatomist to find his scholar-bone."

A lady remonstrated with her butcher for his cruel treatment in putting little lambs to death. "Why, madame," said he, "you would not eat them alive, would you?"

"That's the smallest horse I ever saw," said a countryman, on viewing a Shetland pony. "Indade, now," replied his Irish companion, "but I've seen one as small as two of him."
